The first step to learning how to play arpeggios is to understand the basic techniques. There are two main types of arpeggios: open and closed.

Open arpeggios are played using the open strings of the guitar. This makes them easy to learn and play, and they are a great way to get started with arpeggios.

Closed arpeggios are played using all of the strings of the guitar. This makes them more challenging to learn and play, but they also sound more full and rich.

To play an arpeggio, simply pick the notes of the chord one at a time. You can use your thumb to pick the bass notes, and your fingers to pick the melody notes.
