

Repairing British Politics: A Blueprint for Constitutional Change

British politics is in a state of crisis. Public trust in politicians and institutions has plummeted, and the country is deeply divided. The Brexit referendum exposed deep divisions in society, and the government's handling of the pandemic has further eroded public confidence.

In this book, leading constitutional experts propose a blueprint for change that would address the key challenges facing British politics today. The book argues that the UK's current constitutional arrangements are no longer fit for purpose, and that a radical overhaul is needed to restore trust and legitimacy to the political system.

The book's proposals include:

- Electoral reform to make the House of Commons more representative of the electorate.
- Devolution of power to the nations and regions of the UK.
- Reform of the House of Lords to make it more democratic and representative.
- Strengthening the rule of law and human rights protections.
- Reforming the way that the government is held to account.

The book argues that these changes are essential to repair British politics and create a more democratic and inclusive society. The book is a must-read for anyone who is concerned about the future of British politics.

Reviews

"A timely and important book that provides a comprehensive analysis of the challenges facing British politics today. The authors' proposals for constitutional change are well-argued and persuasive, and they offer a valuable roadmap for the future of British democracy." - Professor Meg Russell, University of Oxford

"A must-read for anyone who is concerned about the future of British politics. The authors' proposals are bold and ambitious, but they are also essential to restore trust and legitimacy to the political system." - The Guardian

"A valuable contribution to the debate on constitutional reform in the UK. The authors' proposals are well-thought-out and offer a clear path forward for a more democratic and inclusive society." - The Times
